ABSTRACT

A system and method for parallel rendering of images are described. Image information is stored into at least one buffer for display on a plurality of display modules. A predetermined number of image units from said image information are mapped to each display module of said plurality of display modules.